Not illustrated. 1882 Excerpt: .a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, standing before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and crying with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb (Rev. vii. 9, 10). And I am to remind you that that shout, which fills the universe with its tones of glory and of most hallowed joy, could never have proceeded from the lips of unfallen beings. That song is the song of the fallen restored, of the lost found. It is the song of victory after conflicts, of joy after sorrow, of good triumphant over evil. Those harps are attuned to one theme, --the hymn of redemption from sin and death; their chords are resonant with the harmony of reconciliation: Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God (Rev. xxi. 3). Again it may be said, All this is true, yet is it at present matter of faith and hope, and not of immediate fruition. Since you have introduced this difficult subject, the entrance of sin and suffering into the world through the fall, can you show that the consequences of the fall have been so overruled by the providence of God as to bring forth, even in...
