VS Verlag Für Sozialwissenschaften Jan 1967, 1967. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 244x170x3 mm. Neuware - Since the 12th century the map of Germany began to cover itself with hundreds of cities, townships with a certain though limited degree of autonomy. This meant a new aggravation of the dis integration of legal unity that was already under way. This phenomena was, however, modified by the formation of families of communal law, where the law of a mother-city was simply transferred to a various number of daughter-cities. Simultaneously arose the obligation for the mother-city to inform in the future her daughter-cities about her practice in contentious matters. As a superior court she became a sort of appeal tribunal. This system expanded widely along with German colonisation in eastern Europe. Here, Magdeburg and Lübeck became the major superior courts. The law-family of Magdeburg extended from Silesia, Teutonic Prussia and Poland deep down into Russia. Lübeck, on the other hand, became the mother-city of the laws of about one hundred German cities, from Kiel to Reval, along the southern shore of the Baltic Sea. The imperial city of Lübeck being at the same time the head of the German Hanse, her law was also law in the counters of the Hanse (St. Peterhof in Novgorod, Deutsche Brücke in Bergen in Norway and others more). Consequently, the council of Lübeck was, since 1295, their uppermost instance. 56 pp. Deutsch.
