Excerpt: . . . 11 Now, they will not make it easy for a lot of businesses across the country still, again, because we are going through a very traumatic financial crisis that was caused in large part by too much borrowing and too much lending. And the adjustment process of that will be difficult. The demand for credit is falling substantially as businesses repair their balance sheets. That process has a long ways to go. But I think our obligation is to make sure that the financial system has the capacity to make credit available to viable businesses. These programs will help. We are continuing to look at new ways to reinforce these programs. We are working very closely with the SBA and with the Fed, and we are open to new suggestions and look at any good idea. Chairman D. I do not want to dwell on the SBA, but I got ODD to tell you, you mention the word SBA - and all of us have done this to audiences back home - and you get a roll of the eyes. That is the mild response. And I say this respectfully about the SBA. I know they try hard. But the fact is that this program - I know some efforts have been made to increase to 90 percent the guarantees and do other things under the 7 ( a ) program. But it basically is not seen as a great friend in a moment like this. So I would urge you to be suggesting -...
