Not illustrated. 1899 Excerpt: .came to my bedside, and, taking my hand, said he would like to stay, but every moment would lessen his chance of escape, as he was due at a certain point before daylight. He assured me his aunts would take care of me, if I could overlook their rebel proclivities. I asked his name and told him mine. When I told him I could not find words to thank him, but hoped in the future to make some way to prove it, he said: Some day you may have it in your power to help some poor Confederate out of a difficulty. I shall then be amply repaid. The light from the lamp fell full on him, and I looked for the first and last time on the dark, handsome face--into the frank, fearless eyes of Eugene Ducatelle. Need I tell you that I have remembered...
