Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: . frank in making the statement that more than half of my injections by the infiltration method for the three above named teeth have been rank failures in patients in middle or past middle life, due to the fact that the alveolar plate in patients of this age has become so dense that it is utterly impossible for the solution to infiltrate through it. Infiltration anesthesia is of value in the young patient, but in my experience it is of little value in the patient, say past 30 years of age. After meeting with many failures, I evolved the new method of intra-osseous technique which makes it possible to anesthetize these three teeth with very little solution and no laceration. It is possible to block the upper sixteen teeth by making two posterior superior alveolar nerve blocking injections and two intra-osseous injections. These four injections are sufficient for cutting down the teeth, cavity preparation, pulp removal or any operation involving the teeth, alveolar process and buccal tissues. In case the teeth are to be extracted, in addition to the four above named injections, the anterior palatine and nasopalatine branches which form the inner nerve loop are blocked. This method of intra-osseous anesthesia eliminates to a great extent any infection, eliminates trauma and hemorrhage. I wish to thank Dr. Brophy and Dr. Johnson for their kind complimentary remarks with reference to my work and wish to state that it is not possible for me to find words...
